

To Cross the Bridge

By: Gitty Zee

Life is full of bridges
Connections of many kinds
As you walk across life's bridges ,
So many thoughts can cross your mind.

'Where am I headed?
Where will my journey lead?'
Life can be confusing
And disconcerting, indeed.

The wind blows you closer
To a destination not yet known
As you stumble and shake
And uncertainty makes you groan.

Oh, how you wish you would have been told
Just how shaky your path would be.
Perhaps you would've stayed on safe ground
Alas! This is your destiny.

Your heart does flip flops
With each obstacle Hashem sends your way.
You face trials and tribulations
Each passing day.

And yet you trudge along,
Although each step is a fight.
You keep going and going;
You try with all your might.

The trip is long and difficult,
And yet there is no choice
But to keep on going
As you struggle to find your inner voice.

Growth is born
Through each challenge you overcome.
It's more about where you're headed
Than where you're coming from.

