

Instant Independence

By: Gitty Zee

Sitting here alone, so thirsty, and alone. So thirsty was I, that I began to moan.
Wishing I was a queen, who has everything brought directly to her throne.
And there I sat, so thirsty and alone. Blind and disabled, just me, myself and my phone.
'What good is it that I can cook', thought I, as my mind began to roam.
Feeling so trapped, with no way to get out on my own.
Wishing I had an airplane, or even a drone.
I have two feet, sure I do, but so unsteady I am if I go out alone; away I would get blown.

Feeling so sorry for myself, I began to groan.
So stuck was I, my heart felt heavy as a stone.
When suddenly, to me, the salvation was thrown.
Instacart! Yes, indeed immediately, I downloaded it to my iPhone.
Within two hours, I went from feeling thirsty and alone, to being that queen sitting on her throne!
Suddenly, I had drinks. No longer was my throat as dry as a bone
No longer did I feel as heavy as a stone.
Now I could picture that imaginary drone. Yes! I am independent, no longer am I alone.
I do not need to wait for a call on the phone.
Now I know it is okay to be alone.
As long as I have instacart installed on my phone
I feel like I got a delicious ice cream cone
And my appreciation for my friend has greatly grown.
You don't only help me exercise at home
Your confidence in my independence you have shown.
